

Twist

Issue 32
June 2011

What next for cashmere?

James Sugden on high prices,
low supply
and the search for quality

Rare and speciality fibres

Why colour is back in menswear

Hi-tech sportswear / outdoor wear

Luxury growth in Vietnam

Contents

June 2011

Regulars

7 Comment

The view from the editor

8 News

Global update from fibre to fashion

42 The Markets

Global raw material prices

45 The List

Technical terms explained

48 My Day

Anna Langdon, student at the Fashion Studio at Sydney Institute of Technology

49 Events

Shows, exhibitions and conferences across the world

Special features

Hi-tech sportswear / outdoor wear

22 Wider reach

Janet Prescott profiles Swiss performance fabrics specialist Eschler, which is broadening its range of hi-tech sportswear textiles, and seeing increasing demand from the consumer for information about its fabrics.

24 High performance

A growing number of fashion and sportswear brands are using Japanese company Toray's technical fabrics. Our Japan correspondent Michiharu Nagamatsu looks at the latest innovations.

28 Best of both

Consumers no longer have to choose between waterproof or breathable garments thanks to Gore-Tex's new Active Shell laminate fabric, as Marianne Curtis explains.

Rare and speciality fibres

34 Hands on

Our South Africa correspondent Bruce Paterson speaks to Rugby by Ralph Lauren designer Laura Zukaitė, who won the inaugural hand knitting Magic of Mohair Design Competition, hosted by Vogue Knitting Live.

36 High point

High prices and low supply are creating several major challenges for the cashmere industry. James Sugden analyses the impact of the latest developments, and explains why Scottish cashmere specialist Johnstons of Elgin continues to source the highest quality fibre.

40 Finer future

Our Peru correspondent Francis Rainsford explains why the llama is an often overlooked source of fine fibre, and why the commercial potential of llama hair is growing thanks to advances in processing.

Features

16 The Knowledge

Bruce Montgomery assesses the dramatic return of colour in recent fashion and fabric collections, and explains why menswear colours are bolder than ever.

20 Global Consumer Watch

Vietnam is home to a growing number of Western luxury fashion brands due to the population's increasing affluence. Karryn Miller assesses the potential of the market, explains why domestic brands are also emerging strongly, and looks at which fabrics are the most popular.

30 The Twist Interview

Paul Johnson, managing director of the innovative UK finishing company WT Johnson, speaks to Jonathan Dyson about why it is working with a growing number of fashion labels, and extending its own brand to luxury consumers.

36

22

20

16

10

30