A 14-page special report on the future of news

On the cover
The internet is taking the news back to the coffee shop culture of the era before mass media: leader, page 11. The industry has been turned upside down, making it more participatory, social, diverse and partisan. Read our special report after page 46

Special report: The news industry

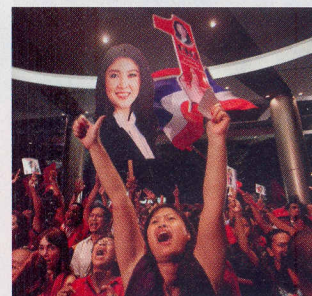

Bulletins from the future

Phone hacking A full judicial inquiry is needed to clean up British journalism: leader, page 12. The saga jeopardises more than merely the News of the World: it threatens Rupert Murdoch, the press as a whole, the police and politicians, page 53. David Cameron under pressure: Bagehot, page 55

Dominique Strauss-Kahn More extraordinary twists in the DSK affair grip France—and torture the Socialist Party, page 47. Is it time to end the perp walk? Page 48

Thailand To stop the country unravelling, Yingluck Shinawatra must keep her word on reconciliation and break it on spending: leader, page 14. The challenge ahead, page 23. Good at business, nicely smiling, but a neophyte in politics, page 24

Chinese consumers What makes the Middle Kingdom's shoppers tick? Page 59. A lull in the number of Chinese listings, page 60

Aviation Airlines and the aircraft industry are belatedly being buffeted by globalisation, pages 67-69. The Europeans are right on emissions trading: leader, page 16

Deleveraging Debt reduction will dominate the rich world's economies for years. Done badly, it could wreck them: leader, page 13. The process of reducing the rich world's debt burden has barely begun, page 71. Britain tries to rebalance, page 54
